REQUIREMENTS

There are two targets, located at different coordinates, and each target is a single x/y rather than a large area. Someone with very bad aim is shooting at them, and the area receives a number of seemingly-random hits.

Write a program that receives these random hits and determines which target is being aimed at.